Annex III- Terms of Reference (TOR)

Request for proposal (RFP) – Development of consultations between police and communities in districts, moderated by local civil society organizations, and establishment of training for police by civil society organizations on rights and civics issues in support of Police E Mardumi (Democratic Policing) in Afghanistan.

A. Introduction

One of the critical areas of work of the UNDP in Afghanistan is in the area of Crisis Prevention and Recovery, within which there are important projects as the Law and Order Trust Fund for Afghanistan (LOTFA), Counter Narcotics Trust Fund (CNTF), Comprehensive Disaster Risk Reduction Program (CDRRP), and Afghanistan’s New Beginnings Program (ANBP). The UNDP is also working in the area of Democratic Policing known as “police e mardumi” to undertake decentralized activities for building of effective police-community partnership for effective service delivery, accountability and ensuring security based on best democratic policing principles. UNDP in other jurisdictions with similar socio political situations has undertaken innovative programmes to bring the law enforcement agencies closer to their people. The program is known by different names in different jurisdictions. In Afghanistan, the UNDP has undertaken a comprehensive study on Prospects of Democratic Policing in Afghanistan based on extensive field based research in select districts of Kabul. This was undertaken based primarily on Ministry of Interior (MOI’s) priorities and the Ministry has shown keen interest to implement the project with the support of the UNDP. Being satisfied with the initial outcomes, the MoI and UNDP agreed to expand the programme in greater areas of Afghanistan to spread the benefit of the programme to the citizen of the country.

It is usually perceived that the role of police is to establish trust with people through activities that enables them to earn confidence of the people, protect citizens against crime and other related threats to life, property, conscience and independence, and work as an important component of the criminal justice system. The present work includes continuing to make endeavours to build extensive police and community relations at the cities, towns, and villages with the purpose of enforcing rule of law combined with an elaborate public awareness program of their rights and duties which will reinforce the MoI’s role to build legitimacy and earn the trust of people. Capacity development and education of the police, public, media, policy makers, civil society and service delivery with element of accountability and transparency are vital components of the project.

Vision and Objectives of Democratic Policing:

To establish systems and mechanisms in place to achieve Police-community partnership for enhanced local security, service delivery and accountability;

- a. To develop forum/s where Community will exchange views and place grievances representing aspirations/concerns of community members and groups to the local police and local government through a democratic process and receive appropriate response from police and relevant Government agencies.

- b. To develop understanding amongst the rank and file of the police about their legal obligation to the citizen as well as give them fair idea about the rights of citizen, human rights and obligation of police to be neutral and non discriminatory in their behavior and sensitize them to be sympathetic and respectful towards the concerns of the community.
- c. To develop an environment where community and Police together through partnership will strengthen law enforcement and achieve better personal security situation, by removing fear of crime and activating criminal justice system.
- d. To promote systems which will facilitate development of efficient, accountable, effective and responsive policing?

Implementers of Democratic Policing

Police e mardumi is jointly implemented by MOI and the UNDP. The implementation process has been undertaken in coordination with bilateral agencies undertaking police reforms initiatives. Ground initiatives and outreach programs with the public and community groups have been undertaken with the emerging Afghanistan civil society organizations.

Project components

1. Project Facilitation:

All project activities have been coordinated by a small UNDP project team with MoI.

2. Establish Community Groups and dialogue platforms.

Community level groups are in the process of being established in districts to communicate with the local police officer on a regular basis on policing issues and are in the process of undertaking the preparation of crime and security plans for the district. The meetings between the community and the police are recorded and action taken or follow up is also undertaken.

3. Community Level Facilitators:

Civil Society Groups will be facilitating the community-police meetings, document and also capacity builds the community members, leaders and para legals etc. Legal education and communication skills training are undertaken for the police.

4. Capacity Development:

The Police e mardumi efforts have a large capacity development strategy for its various stakeholders. The capacity building is undertaken through workshops, trainings using participatory learning: Police Peer Educators, CSO's, Lawyers, Para Legals, Parliamentarians, Media and Community Security Groups etc. Also a broadcast programme over radio was undertaken informing people about their rights and responsibilities.

5. Initiatives at the Police Stations:

- Information desks established. Complaints and information recorded, classified according to quality of information, referred to response teams for action and results of action recorded with a provision to generate reports on the nature of disposal of the information containing the process it underwent and the actions taken on the issue..

- A standard documentation process is under preparation for bringing in uniformity in the recording and subsequent disposal of information/complaints received in those Districts.
- Community groups mobilized to provide institutional support for partnership and enhance the capacity of both police and community groups through legal training.
- Develop women’s platform in each District and provide training on rights of women and children.

6. Civilian and civil society oversight mechanism

Among many ideas currently in circulation, two types of civil society oversight mechanisms are currently being explored. Civil Society groups and other informed groups such as Parliamentarians, civil society etc are being informed on police reforms processes in an effort to build up a critical mass which can push for overall reforms in the police. Further, a public complaints mechanism such as the 119 which is currently functioning as a hotline at the MOI which is already expanded, in a little modified form, at Kandahar and further plans are there for expansion to Herat, Nangarhar and Mazar. Police e mardumi presupposes that establishing such systems will support in building the bridge between the police and public and make the police accountable.

Background

Issue:

The National Police Strategy sets “building public confidence” in the police as the highest priority, but there are widespread complaints from all sectors of society that their needs are not effectively communicated to the police, or that the police are not responsive. Although Afghanistan has traditional channels for community decision making, these structures often do not function for police because of lack of trust in that institution. This is a serious shortcoming considering that police are perhaps the most visible “face” of governance and justice.

To address this, a number of Afghan civil society and international community initiatives have engaged police in community-consultation mechanisms that strengthen responsiveness and accountability. These have achieved positive results both in building public trust in the police, and connecting police to community resources that help them perform their duties more effectively, which then strengthens public confidence even further.

Content of only one LOT:

Following components will belong to only one LOT. Offerers will have to implement the following programme based on the number of Lots they bid for. Depending on the number of Lots one bids and is awarded following components will accordingly be multiplied.

Each proposal will identify and the format and methodology of the consultations, including the participants to be involved, meeting specific criteria noted below, topics of NGO training that can be offered for that Region, and proposed local partners for both consultations and training.

Objectives:

- Create a variety of consultation and engagement mechanisms between police and communities, moderated by local civil society organizations.
- Building on proven models for consultation, encourage creative approaches to consultations and engagement and share best practices throughout the Democratic Policing community.
- Maximize the involvement of local civil society organizations with legitimacy in their communities who can sustain community-police engagement over time. The goal is to develop local relationships, not to import content from the outside.
- Develop awareness among communities and police of the value of regular consultations and engagement and capacity to manage these effectively.
- Through the consultations, develop actionable agreements between police and community to enhance safety and security and community-police relations in their districts, and enhance capacity to manage implementation.
- Increase accountability and responsiveness of police to public and public confidence in police.

Expected Outputs:

A. Outputs for Consultations

- Presentation of work plan to UNDP/MOI/any other partner/s suggested by UNDP.
- Best Practices Conferences--All contractors will be required to receive a briefing organized by UNDP about existing models and materials for community consultation so that they are familiar with lessons learned from previous experience and can share materials or curriculum as appropriate. At the end of the project, another conference will be held to share newly developed best practices.
- Curriculum/Format to be followed for consultations: Contractor will provide description of the proposed format and justification for why that format will allow participants to build trust, and to make and sustain agreements to improve security in the community or police-community relations. - Commitment of district civil society organization to support consultations: For each district in the lot, the contractor will identify a local civil society organization based in the district (such as CDCs, NGOs, etc.) who will be involved in facilitating the consultations and in monitoring implementation of agreements and commitments. The contractor will provide sufficient capacity building for this local partner to play an active role in:

- 1) preparing for the consultation (contacting participants and getting their agreement to attend, helping them understand the goals of the event),
- 2) assisting the contractor to moderate and run the consultation, and
- 3) sustaining the interactions between police and community during the contract period, and assisting with/monitoring implementation of the agreements.

- Schedule of consultation dates for each district
- Action Plans for each district (unless an alternative method of follow up is approved) and subsequent reporting on the district’s progress on the Action Plan.

B. Outputs for NGO-led training

- Organize in-district training for police on specialized civil issues such as laws/civics, preventing and responding to violence against women, juvenile justice, community relations, conflict management, and related subjects. All training will be provided by civil society organizations who are local to the district, or to the region if no local district organizations are available. At least two topics will be offered per district. Training sessions may vary in length but should reach at least 20 police in each district each month. Coordinate with other training providers to reduce any duplication in offerings.
- Establish standards for training. The contractor will work with MOI and the NGOs to establish basic guidelines for NGOs offering training to police on the topics above. These guidelines would not attempt to regulate all content, but would establish the topics to be covered, and preferred delivery approaches. All contractors for the Lots will coordinate with each other on this effort.
- Ensure Quality Control. The contractor will identify CSOs who want to provide training to police and ensure that their training meets the standards by attending their training, reviewing their curriculum, and offering any additional training-of-trainers and materials necessary to bring them up to standard.
- Provide Access to police units. The contractor will work with MOI to issue formal authorization for CSO trainings that meet the standards, to facilitate their access to local commanders. The contractor will help arrange access for authorized CSOs to police units to provide training. Note, the goal is to build relationships between CSOs and ANP so that in the future they can deal directly with MOI and ANP authorities without facilitation from the contractor.
- Facilitate CSO visits to MOI Academies and training centers as “guest speakers” on civil issues. Seeing CSOs as part of the formal training would give police confidence that such interactions with civil society are officially sanctioned. The guests could also help police identify community resources that can be assets to them in their duties, and prepare for interactions with them once they leave the schoolhouse. The contractor should arrange at least 1 CSO guest lecture for the regional training centers/Academy in that region.

- Collect appropriate educational and entertainment materials developed by CSOs for distribution to training centers and police units. At least 200 copies per district will be provided. Materials will be approved by UNDP before reprinting. Permission for reprinting/distribution must be granted by CSO owner.
- Conduct Follow-up Monitoring: The contractor will help the CSOs establish procedures for continuing relationships with the police districts they have trained, including monitoring of police behavior related to the training provided.

1. Duration of training and hand holding

- Total duration of contract: 7 months;
- Preparation for consultation workshops: Design curriculum, identify local partners, and build buy-in to consultations among police and community members within first 30 days of implementation of contract.
- First moderated consultation beginning within 45 days of the implementation of contract.
- Continue moderated consultations according to community-driven schedule on biweekly or at least monthly schedule for duration of the contract.
- List of local NGO-led training to be offered within 20 days of the implementation of contract
- First local NGO-led trainings beginning with 30 days of the implementation of contract.

Project Area:

- To be decided based on the Districts that have been mentioned in Lot for which the vendor submitted a quotation.

Reporting and Monitoring Arrangements

The organization will report to the focal points of Democratic Policing and to the CPRU/UNDP. The following reporting modalities are essential:

1. One progress report on a monthly basis other than regular communications to Democratic Policing.
2. Regular meetings organized by the organization with its field based coordinators/trainers, UNDP, MOI officials where required, UNDP and other partner organizations etc to discuss progress of work.
